SKIMMED THE CREAM CLOSE

"Has anybody heard the latest news about the Newtons?" inquired Mrs. Jones as the Ladies' Aid Society of the Deer Run Church adjourned its regular monthly meeting.

"Why no, Mr. Newton ain't sick again, is he?" asked Mrs. Smith.

"Oh, no; he's all right again. In fact, he's passed our farm twice lately on his way to town," continued Mrs. Jones. "The news I was referring to was that I heard it might straight that the whole family's going to move to Louisville."

"Well I never. What's taking them to Louisville? Why I supposed they'd always live in this neighborhood. It was only year before last that Mr. Newton had that big ol' fashioned house done over from top to bottom an' water an' gas put in."

"It's the children that's taking them. You see Nellie'll be fourteen this winter an' she'll finish the eighth grade by Christmas. She naturally wants to go to High School. An' then there's Henry, the next one; he wants to get ready to go to the State University, so there you are."

"Well I never. Look here, what're we goin' to do I'd like to know. If this keeps up it won't be very long until we won't have any children worth mentioning in our school, an' we won't have many strong members left in our church, an' no neighborhood that's fit to live in either. The Newtons ain't the first family that's left here an' gone to Louisville to educate their children."

"Well I should say they ain't. I can't count the people that have left here in the past five years on the fingers of both of my hands. An' those that have left were the best we had, too."

"Looks to me like the people in big cities have shown a lot of sense in building big schools an' making them attractive. If the cities have taken the same number of fine people out of every neighborhood in the State of Kentucky that they have out of this little neighborhood, they've about skimmed the cream pretty close."

"But what can we do?"

"Why can't we have good schools?"

"But schools cost money."

"Of course they do. If the big cities can get our best people to leave comfortable farms and homes, it must be a paying proposition. If it is why can't we do the same thing?"

"Why a big school would cost the neighborhood several thousand dollars a year."

"Well, suppose it did. If the ten fine families that have left here in the past five years could have been kept here happy and prosperous, wouldn't it pay?"

"Yes, I reckon it would, because I heard my husband say that every time one of these fine families left, the neighborhood was that much poorer. He said it meant a lot of money gone, because these men rented their farms an' spent the money they got in the big cities."

"You can say what you please, we're never going to have a fine neighborhood until we have real country schools."

"Yes, an' now that you've quoted your husband, I'm going to quote mine. He said last night that we can do a tremendous amount of good improving our own schools, but that we should also move Heaven and earth to get our whole school system out of politics."

"Good; you tell him we are all with him in that too. Good-bye."

Homesick Soldiers.

Home sickness, or nostalgia, as the doctors term it, has long been recognized as a military disease, which is especially liable to attack recruits and even seasoned soldiers, if they serve for long periods in foreign climes. A French scientist has published a book on the malady. He says, "The symptoms of home sickness are great mental dejection, loss of appetite, indifference to what is going on around, and irregular action of the digestive organs." The bad effects of home sickness in an army were first noted among Swiss soldiers some time ago.

The men were forbidden to sing or listen to their native melodies for fear of rousing in them an overpowering longing for their mountain homes. A doctor writing at that period cited many instances of the serious results of sentimental music on soldiers campaigning far from their own shores. An English physician has stated that home sickness is a prevalent disease amongst prisoners of war, who display such symptoms as hysterical weeping, fever, and a rapid thinning of the face.

Distress in the Stomach.

There are many people who have a distress in the stomach after meals. It is due to indigestion and easily remedied by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets after meals. Mrs. Henry Padghan, Victor, N. Y., writes: "For some time I was troubled with ache and distress in my stomach after eating, also with constipation. About six months ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They regulated the action of my bowels and the headache and other annoyances ceased in a short time." For sale by Paul Drug Co.
